India:

From a milk-deficit nation to a milk-products exporter

The evolution of the dairy sector in India and the stellar role played by dairy cooperatives since the launch of Operation Flood form an integral part of the country's remarkable growth story after Independence. Today, India is the largest producer of milk in the world, achieving an annual production of 221.06 million tonnes during the year 2021-22 & contributing 23% of global milk production.

The dairy sector assumes a great deal of significance for India on various accounts. As an industry, it employs more than 80 million rural households, with the majority being small and marginal farmers as well as the landless. The cooperative societies have not only made the farmers self-sufficient but have also broken the shackles of gender, caste, religion, and community. Women producers form the major workforce of the dairy sector in the country. The sector is an important job provider, especially for women, and plays a leading role in women's empowerment.

Indian Dairy Industry:

Galore of business opportunities

The total size of dairy market was about 162 billion US $ in 2021. It has grown at the rate of about 15% per annum during years 2006 to 2021 and is expected to reach a market size of about 375 billion US $ by 2027 as per IMARC 2021 report. The liquid milk market represents about half of the total dairy market in the country. Of the total liquid milk market, the share of organized sector has increased from 32% to 41% in last 3 years. It is estimated that the share of organized sector would reach to 54% by 2026.

Factors like - increasing urbanization, increasing disposable income, transforming in to a health conscious society, emphasis & growth in cold chain infrastructure in India; growing consumption of dairy value-added products like ice-creams, cheese, sweets etc., increasing participation of private sector and milk and milk based products being one of the important part of Indian food culture clearly indicate on the tremendous business opportunities in the dairy industry in the years to come.
